

The Creation of Lego

Harry is curious about how Lego was made. So, his dad took him to the library to borrow some books. Once the corner of Harry's eye saw that picture of that Lego statue, Harry told his dad again and again to read it to him.

Harry was watching TV until an ad came up. Harry didn't know what it was but he thought it was really amazing. He showed his sister Amelia and she said it was a Lego set. Harry told his dad if he could buy it for him. Harry's dad said that he could buy it! Harry was full of joy. Harry's parcel of his Lego set has arrived. As soon as the doorbell rang, Harry straight away opened the door. It was Harry's Lego Set!

Harry's dad has realised that Harry loves Lego so he decided to take him to LEGOLAND in the summer. Harry was super excited. In Legoland, Harry was so happy because he got to touch a Lego statue! After they came back from Legoland, Harry gave a huge thank you to his dad for taking him and Amelia to Legoland.

There was still one thing that Harry was curious about. How was Lego invented? So, for days Harry has been doing research about how Lego was invented. Finally, Harry found out by doing some research that Lego was created by a man who wanted a job. So, the man looked outside and saw a shop called Lego. The man thought it was a good name for his company, so he started with little bricks that had dots on the bottom. People then started to realise that the pieces didn't stick together and just fell off.

After that, the man's son realised it too, so they both decided to put dots on the top so the dots on the bottom will stick to the dots on the top. That's how Lego was actually invented.
